The Partnerships Playbook

In September 2015, world leaders agreed on a new set of global sustainable development goals, seeking to address some of the world's biggest challenges. For the first time, all United Nations Member States have agreed on a plan of action for people, planet prosperity and peace, through global partnership: the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, with 17 Goals aimed at ending poverty, discrimination and inequality, and addressing climate change and its impacts.

For all people to thrive and achieve their full potential they must be able to realize their universal human rights. These rights are interrelated, interdependent and indivisible. As responsible partners in sustainable development we are working to transform the ways we work with people and communities to enable them to be leaders for their own and their communities' development.

Multi-stakeholder, and multi-sectoral partnerships, including 'Every Woman, Every Child', the 'Scaling Up Nutrition (SUN) Movement', the 'Zero Hunger Challenge', the 'Global Partnership for Education' and 'Sanitation and Water For All', are encouraging multi-sectoral actions that are transforming the health, nutrition, food security, sanitation and education of individuals, communities and nations. Our collaborative efforts seek to improve the interconnected issues of health, food and nutrition security, sustainable agriculture, sanitation and education of all people, particularly women, children and adolescents.

We are bound by our commitment to work together to support all people to achieve their full potential. Our partnerships are based on the principles of national ownership, of mutual trust, of transparency and of accountability. They are voluntary and collaborative, and include both public and non-public stakeholders. We seek not to duplicate efforts but to benefit from shared efficiencies. We are working together to achieve results, sharing risks and responsibilities, resources and benefits – and we will be judged by the outcomes for people everywhere. Our results and impact will be tracked through Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) review process and will inform progress toward achieving all SDGs.

We share these common values and call on our partners to take action. If we all act on the 2030 Agenda, we can achieve extraordinary results in the next 15 years.
